

DEPUTY CHIEF FOR COMPUTER CRIME
COMPUTER CRIME AND INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY SECTION
CRIMINAL DIVISION
U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE
WASHINGTON, DC

About the Office:

The employees of the Computer Crime and Intellectual Property Section (“CCIPS”) focus on issues raised by computer and intellectual property crime. CCIPS lawyers perform a range of case and policy work both domestically and internationally. This work includes: conducting investigations and litigating cases; advising federal prosecutors and law enforcement agents; commenting upon and proposing legislation; coordinating international efforts to combat computer crime and intellectual property crime; training law enforcement groups; and addressing non-government parties with a stake in these issues.

Areas of expertise possessed by CCIPS attorneys include computer hacker investigations, intellectual property crimes (copyright piracy, trademark counterfeiting, and theft of trade secrets), criminal misuse of emerging technologies, electronic privacy laws, and search and seizure of computers. For more information about the Section and its work, see the CCIPS website at: www.cybercrime.gov.

Responsibilities and Opportunity Offered:

The Computer Crime and Intellectual Property Section is seeking an experience attorney with supervisory and management skills to serve as the Deputy Chief for Computer Crime. The Position is at the GS-15 level.

The Deputy Chief reports to the Principal Deputy Chief of the Section and serves as the direct supervisor for three Assistant Deputy Chiefs (for Litigation, International Matters and Technology and Procedural Law) and secondary supervisor for sixteen to nineteen of the Section’s attorneys who specialize in the enforcement of criminal laws including laws relating to computer network attacks, technical issues and procedural law. Working with the Principal Deputy Chief and the Chief of the Section, the Deputy will bear responsibility for developing the Section’s computer crime program, which includes investigative and prosecutive programs in concert with the U.S. Attorney’s Offices; adopting policy to strengthen the prevention of and response to computer crime; overseeing the Section’s efforts regarding CALEA, CFIUS, forensic issues and the Electronic Computer Privacy Act, contributing to the development of sound legislation, and supervising the Section’s international computer crime program, including operational, training, and diplomatic efforts abroad.

The Deputy will supervise the attorneys in this group to execute work requirements effectively; clarify roles and responsibilities (including the intra-team balance of responsibilities); monitor the effectiveness of the team as a whole and the individuals that comprise it and make adjustments as necessary; motivate others to do their best work and delegate appropriate levels of responsibility and control; share information and foster communication, teamwork, and problem-solving both within the team and across the Section; actively support the career development of subordinates and seek opportunities to help them stretch their skills and enhance their professional standing; inspire trust and confidence; and provide specific coaching/feedback on subordinates' performances (positive and negative) in concrete ways that reinforce good performances and improve deficiencies.

The Deputy will also assist and support the Principal Deputy Chief and the Chief in leading and managing the Section and in representing it to other agencies, branches, countries, the private sector, and the press.
